& It's About the Fundamentals

“Self Portrait after Rembrandt,”
Mara Levin, 1975, oil on pressed board.

*“Drawing is the root of everything,
and the time spent on that is actually all profit.”*

— Vincent Van Gogh, September 5, 1882, The Hague

Van Gogh’s commitment to studying European foundational drawing skills and techniques follows a tradition that began in Ancient Greece, and continued through the Renaissance and into modern studio training of the early 20th century.

A recent shift in training away from classical methods has resulted in a decline in basic skills, leaving many artists feeling unprepared for the challenges they face.

Mara received classical training in drawing, painting, and sculpture in college. Today, Mara is part of the contemporary atelier movement, which has been gaining momentum in the United States, France, Italy, and Great Britain.

At Levin Classical Art Atelier, the program of study uses the kinds of tools and techniques used by Leonardo da Vinci, Van Gogh, and Picasso—methods still relied upon by modern masters like Gerhard Richter, David Hockney, and Julie Mehretu, whose mastery of foundational skills inspires bold and innovative expression.

“Mara’s drawing classes offer an exceptionally solid foundation in all the fundamental skills and tools, both atelier “old school,” and modern. Her expertise and teaching experience, along with her talent and enthusiasm, bring her students into an art-based camaraderie of community that enhances each class and inspires the participants.” — Ruth (student)

Biography

Mara Levin is an award-winning fine artist, art educator, and graphic designer with a Bachelor of Fine Arts in Painting from Boston University. With over four decades of experience, she is known for her mastery of classical techniques, as well as her innovative approach to art education.

Mara's training includes classical drawing, painting, and sculpture, under master artists such as David Aaronson, Nicholas Edmunds, Lloyd Lillie, Congor Metcalf, David Ratner, and Janice Corkin Rudolf. She further honed her skills in art methods and materials, commercial art, and modern studio techniques.

Throughout her career, Mara has exhibited her work in galleries and juried shows across New England, including the Cambridge Art Association, Concord Art Association, and Powers Gallery. She is a juried member of the esteemed Oil Painters of America, an organization that champions foundational training—a value central to her teaching philosophy—and her artwork is part of private collections nationwide.

In addition to her fine art practice, Mara has an extensive teaching portfolio, including positions at Fivesparks in Harvard, MA, Post Road Art Center, and multiple public schools. She offers a comprehensive program emphasizing foundational skills while fostering individual creativity.

Currently, Mara teaches drawing and painting at Levin Classical Art Atelier, where she combines her extensive training with contemporary teaching methods to help empower artists at all stages of their creative journey.

Mara's expertise extends to graphic design and illustration, where she has worked with major clients, creating impactful designs ranging from corporate identities to trade show materials.

This is an example of a thumbnail drawing, a quick layout for planning larger drawings and paintings. In thumbnails, artists seek to resolve composition and other elements before committing to a larger investment in time and materials.

Portfolio Drawings

“Nude,” 1971, Conte crayon.

Conte crayons are versatile and come in several colors. They can be used blunt or sanded to points for line drawings, and the sides are great for blocking in large areas of shading.

“Jeanne & Jamaica,” 1997, graphite, portrait commission.

“Nude,” 1972, charcoal.

Fun: Cover your paper with charcoal and draw with a kneaded eraser.

“Gaucho Barry,” 2024, charcoal on Denril Vellum.

Vellum is an interesting translucent surface for drawings.

“Rosie,” 1971, graphite.

Rosie modeled for many years at Boston University.

Portfolio Paintings

"Diane Peeling Potatoes," 1987, oil

My friend hired me to copy this painting; I painted her into the scene. She says her five children each claim it to be their family heirloom.

"Pippin and the Bee," 2019, oil, cat portrait commission.

"The Potato Chip Wars: Ambush," 2019, pastel.

"The Path Home," 2018, acrylic.

This painting was my art therapy after an accident.

"The Potato Chip Wars: Skirmish," 2019, oil.

Teaching Impact

Inspiring growth and creativity in students of all ages through a nurturing and adaptable teaching approach.

- “I think we all benefited enormously from Mara’s solid knowledge base, extensive experience, and indisputable talent. I appreciated the detailed curriculum and supporting documentation and links to further our study on the internet. She juggled addressing our needs as students at different levels with bottomless encouragement, patience, and finesse.” – Ruth Pannell
- “Mara is a wonderful teacher. She provides theory, technique, and advice in a very accessible manner. Her thoughtful critiques help you learn to evaluate your own work, and the skills she teaches will help you to improve and grow your art.” – Christine Latini
- “Mara is wonderful! She goes out of her way to make everyone feel welcome in the class. I feel lucky to have found her and plan to continue in the fall.” – Betty Sprague

A few simple items and a good light source can inspire a beautiful work of art.

Artistic Excellence

Bringing subjects to life with extraordinary insight and a deep connection to their essence.

- “I cannot express the great joy I experience every time I look at the portrait of Chelsea which you drew. You truly captured her essence in one image... It must be this gift of insight which makes your work so special.” – Jennifer Tousignant
- “As I look at the portrait which so adeptly captures Winnie’s personality, I’m reminded of the love and trust that has grown between us... I will keep her portrait, and after she’s gone, I can still look into her eyes that reflect her regal, elegant, trusting, and loving soul.” – Sandy George
- “I still have it in a beautiful frame. I will cherish it forever!!” – Faye Belcastro Silva

Professional Expertise

Delivering innovative design solutions and unmatched client service for over four decades.

- “I had the privilege of working closely with Mara at two Fortune 500 companies. At one, we had a sophisticated Boston-based client who loved working with her. They were delighted with Mara’s responsive, collaborative approach that allowed them to build their creative vision over a series of drafts and various media.” – Patty Hassett
- “Mara provides us with superior work, a fair price, and the utmost in personal attention to the details.” – Steven Zuromski
- “It’s not often you can find a design firm that offers an attitude of customer responsiveness and service—or one that has extraordinary high integrity—or one that offers outstanding state-of-the-art design... [Mara Levin] has it all.” – Ben Neiman

Roll a long narrow piece of paper around a can. Set up a light source. Just for fun, try drawing without any contour lines.
